9 (After Motion argument of both attorneys, the following 10 occurred:)

11 THE COURT: Okay. All right. Okay, Patrick?
12 Defendants move to set aside the $440,000 verdict after a 13 trial in this matter. The grounds asserted are that:
14 One, That the Court incorrectly failed to direct a verdict
15 in defendants' favor or the primary assumption of risk 16 defense further incorrectly directed verdict in favor of 17 plaintiff on the assumption of the risk defense and 18 separate issue of the enforceability of plaintiff's written 19 waiver under General Obligations Law 5326; Two, The Court
20 failed to instruct the jury with regard to secondary 21 assumption of risk; Three, The defendants were entitled to 22 directed verdict because plaintiff failed to submit 23 sufficient evidence of negligence; Four, The damages for 24 loss of household services was not supported by the 25 evidence; And Five, The verdict was against the weight of

1 the evidence, and the individual and combined errors were 2 unfairly prejudicial.

3 With respect to the defendants' first ground, 4 that this Court incorrectly failed to direct a verdict in 5 the defendants' favor on the primary assumption of risk 6 defense and further incorrectly directed a verdict in favor 7 of the plaintiff on the assumption of the risk defense and 8 separate issue of the enforceability of plaintiff's written
9 waiver under General Obligations Law 5-326, the record
10 demonstrated the plaintiff was a user rather than a 11 participant within the meaning of the statute. Under the 12 statute, the release/waiver is void and unenforceable if 13 (1) the injured person who entered into the agreement was a 14 user of the facility, and (2) the owner received a fee or 15 other compensation for the use of the facility. The 16 evidence showed that the plaintiff paid a fee to Fulton
17 Speedway for access to the pit area, plaintiff paid a fee
18 to enter the pit area of a racetrack and signed a release 19 form, which specifically stated, as did plaintiff's waiver, 20 that plaintiff recognized inherent risks in entering the 21 area, and released the owners from all claims and 22 liabilities arising out of strict liability or ordinary 23 negligence. The plaintiff was not a member of the pit crew 24 at a racetrack as in the cases relied upon by defendants, 25 and the undisputed evidence showed that he was not a

1 participant rather than a user. defendants rely upon the 2 plaintiff's deposition testimony where he stated he had in 3 the past helped his son in the pit area and that he injured
4 plaintiff when he was standing in front of a board posted 5 on the concession building where he had gone to check his 6 son's start position. The record was devoid of any proof 7 that plaintiff was acting as part of the pit crew on the 8 night of the incident. Nor was the Court's holding at the 9 close of the proof that the waiver was unenforceable, 10 barred by its prior denial of the summary judgment motion.
11 See, Duval v. Skouras, 70 NYS2d 150 (NY Co. 1947).

12 The defendants' argument that the Court reversed 13 its own rulings or violate the law of the case doctrine is 14 without merit. The primary issue on the summary judgment 15 motion with respect to the unenforceability of the waiver 16 under the statute was plaintiff's status as a user or 17 participant. In deciding the summary judgment motion, the 18 Court determined the issue was factual in nature and 19 depended on a presentation of proof at trial regarding 20 plaintiff's role and activities on the night he was 21 injured. Thus, plaintiff's motion to have the waiver 22 declared void as a matter of law and his motion in limine 23 seeking that same relief were denied. At the close of 24 proof, however, after hearing the testimony of plaintiff's 25 activities, and of other witnesses and experts, the Court

1 determined the issue in favor of plaintiff and directed a 2 verdict on the issue of unenforceability of the waiver. As 3 stated previously, no rational jury, after hearing that 4 evidence, could have returned that the plaintiff in this 5 matter was a participant in any way, shape or form. There 6 was no proof at all. Thus there was no inconsistency in 7 the Court's ruling.

8 With respect to the second ground that the Court
9 failed to instruct the jury with regard to secondary
10 assumption of the risk, the first caveat to PJI 2:55, 11 Implied Assumption of the Risk, states that "as a general 12 rule application of primary assumption of risk should be 13 limited to cases appropriate for absolution of duties, such 14 as personal injury claims arising from sporting events, 15 sponsored athletic and recreative activities or athletic 16 and recreational pursuits that take place at designated 17 venues." Since the doctrine serves to preclude a 18 plaintiff's claim entirely, its use must be limited to 19 cases that are appropriate to relieve a defendant of all 20 duty of care and completely bar any recovery by the 21 plaintiff as opposed to applying the principle of 22 comparative negligence to reduce recovery. See, PJI 2:55.
23 As a result, application of the doctrine is generally 24 limited solely to cases where the injured plaintiff is a 25 knowing and willing participant in a professional or

1 organized competitive sporting event. The duty of care 2 owed to a participant in a professional sporting event must 3 be evaluated by considering the risks the participant
4 assumed when he or she freely elected to participate. See,
5 Turcotte v. Fell, 68 NY2d 432 (1986). The key issue is a 6 particular participant's awareness of the risks based upon 7 his or her skill and experience. See, Morgan v. State, 90 8 NY2d 471 (1997). The rationale is that where the risks of 9 the activity are fully comprehended or obvious, the 10 participant's actual consent is implied from the act of 11 electing to participate, and therefore as a matter of law 12 the consent relieves the defendant of its duty of care.
13 See, PJI 2:55 Comment, p. 356 - 357. The law is well 14 settled that a person who chooses to participate in a sport 15 or recreational activity necessarily consents to certain 16 risks that are inherent and arise out of the nature of the 17 sport generally and flow from such participation. See, 18 Custodi v. Amherst, 20 NY3d 83 (2012). The undisputed 19 evidence did not support the application of the doctrine 20 here since plaintiff was not participating in a sport or 21 recreational activity and did not agree to assume any risk 22 that might flow from such participation. He was 23 undisputedly a spectator.

24 In addition, the Court's denial of defendants' 25 request to charge secondary assumption of risk separate and

1 apart from comparative negligence was proper. Defendants
2 failed to make an exception on the record to the Court's 3 denial of their request for that charge and therefore they 4 cannot now argue the verdict should be set aside because 5 the charge was improper. See, CPLR 4110-b; see also, 6 Genet v. Appel, 118 AD3d 519 (1st Dept. 2004). In 7 addition, the Court's refusal of defendants' request to 8 charge on secondary assumption of the risk separate from 9 comparative negligence was proper. There was no such 10 principle discussed in the PJI and there is no charge.
11 While primary assumption of the risk is a recognized 12 doctrine, secondary assumption of risk is not. The 13 doctrine of secondary assumption of the risk "has never 14 been discussed by name or analyzed in any reported New York 15 State case" and that a doctrine "rests upon principles of 16 comparative negligence. The trier of fact under secondary 17 assumption of the risk reduces the plaintiff's recovery by 18 the percentage determined to relate to his or her own 19 culpable conduct." See, Livshitz v. US Tennis Association
20 National Tennis Center, 196 Misc.2d 460 (NY Co. 2003).

21 With respect to the defendants' third ground, 22 that they were entitled to a directed verdict because 23 plaintiff failed to submit sufficient evidence of 24 negligence, defendants claim that plaintiff testified that.
25 However, when asked if he found defendant Holland

1 responsible for his injuries, plaintiff testified "I find 2 him responsible, yes." (Transcript, p. 203). With respect
3 to defendant Circle L Speedway, defendants argue that 4 plaintiff's expert failed to apply actual industry 5 standards to his assessment of the practices at the 6 Speedway and failed to express an opinion as to causation.
7 However, a review of the record shows that Barnard
8 testified that there are standards in the motor sports 9 industry relating to the pit areas of racetracks and as to 10 what those standards were (pp 242-44). He also testified 11 the industry standards were not met by this defendant (pp.
12 244-47; 287-89). The plaintiff established this 13 defendant's negligence based on the totality of proof at 14 trial and the jury is capable of concluding that the 15 dangerous conditions in the pit area to which Barnard 16 testified were a substantial cause of the plaintiff's 17 injuries. See, Kioleidis by Kioleidis v. Permagent United 18 Sales, Inc., 150 AD2d 526 (2d Dept. 1989).

19 The fourth prong of the defendants' motion is 20 that the damages for loss of household services was not 21 supported by the record. This argument is without merit as 22 well. Plaintiff is correct in opposition that defendants 23 waived any right to raise this argument because they failed 24 to preserve the right to do so at trial. They consented to 25 the verdict sheet which contained lines for past and future

- Court Decision - 9/29/15 -

1 loss of household services. There was extensive discussion 2 following objection by defendants' counsel regarding the 3 liability questions on the verdict sheet and those were 4 changed in response to defendants' objections (pp.
5 511-12). As to damages, however, the Court specifically 6 noted the verdict sheet included "loss of possible services 7 and pain and suffering" up to the date of the verdict."
8 Then Question 10: What is the future amount of household
9 services and pain and suffering? Defendants raised no 10 objection to the inclusion of the line on the verdict sheet 11 for past or future loss of household services, and the 12 Court then asked again whether either side had any 13 objection to the verdict sheet. Defense counsel answered
14 in the negative. By consenting to the verdict sheet 15 submitted, defendants failed to preserve any objection to 16 it for post verdict review. See, Mauerer v. Tops Markets, 17 LLC, 70 AD3d 1504 (4th Dept. 2010). Moreover, even if the 18 new trial were ordered, it would be limited solely to past 19 and future household expenses, as in the Smith, supra case 20 relied upon by defendants. Where several elements of 21 damages are awarded by a jury and only some are challenged, 22 any new trial that may be ordered is only with respect to 23 the challenged element. See, Birmingham v. Peter, Senior 24 and Mary L. Liberator Family, LP, 90 AD3d 1483 (4th Dept.
25 2011). In addition, the jury's award for loss of household

1 services was supported by the evidence.

2 Finally, defendants argue the verdict was against 3 the weight of the evidence and the individual and combined 4 record were unfairly prejudicial. To grant such a motion, 5 the trial court must conclude that there is simply no valid 6 line of reasoning and permissible inferences which could 7 possibly lead rational people to the conclusion reached by 8 the jury on the basis of the evidence at trial. See, 9 Winiarski v. Harris, 78 AD3d 1556 (4th Dept. 2012). This 10 means that the moving party must establish the evidence 11 presented by the nonmoving party was legally insufficient.
12 A court should not set aside a verdict on this ground 13 unless the evidence is found to preponderate so heavily in 14 favor of the losing party that the jury could not have 15 reached its verdict on any fair interpretation of the 16 evidence. See, Jurkowski Ex Rel Cosgrove v. Sheehan 17 Memorial Hospital, 85 AD3d 1672 (4th Dept. 2011). That is 18 not the case here. Much of the defendants' argument on 19 this point is a restatement of the contention that the 20 Court erred in holding that the waiver was unenforceable, 21 and this has been addressed. The remainder of the 22 defendants' arguments suggest that this ruling was fatal to 23 their defense, since it was made after the close of proof.
24 However, the record shows that the defendants also offered 25 proof to challenge plaintiff's negligence claim as well.
